

Our Commitment to Safety

At McDermott Top Shop, safety has always been at the forefront of everything we do. For over 30 years, we've remained committed to protecting our team, supporting our customers, and contributing positively to the communities we serve. That commitment starts in our facility and in how we care for the people behind every project.

Safety lives at the core of our foundation, including exposure to silica.

We cut 100% wet, minimizing airborne silica at the source. All fabrication takes place in our climate-controlled, dust-monitored environment, designed to protect both the product and the professionals crafting it. Our safety systems are continuously maintained and refined to meet and exceed best practices.

We also regularly invite OSHA to inspect our facility as part of our transparent, proactive approach. Their most recent visit was just last week, reinforcing our confidence in the systems and standards we uphold.

Travis McDermott, President and Owner of McDermott Top Shop, currently serves as the President of the International Surface Fabricators Association (ISFA) — where he is actively working to advance health and safety practices across the entire industry. Many of the standards now gaining national attention are ones we've already had in place for years.

Here's what this means for you:

- Your countertops are crafted in a safe, controlled environment.
- Our fabrication process protects our employees and delivers a product you can feel confident installing and living with.

We're proud to lead the way in responsible fabrication and remain fully committed to the safety of our team, the success of our partners, and the trust of every customer we serve.
